Nursing home neighbors speak out at hearing

by Arlene Surprenant

It was an exercise in futility, or so it seemed to the 40 or so angry residents who showed up at Monday's Dept. of Public Health (DPH) hearing to rule on a certificate of need for a proposed nursing home in Wilmington.

Though Chestnut Street homeowners voiced their opposition to the two stury multi-level nursing home known as Wilmington Woods Nursing Care Center, they were told few of their concerns would be taken into consideration in issuing a certificate of need. The certificate is necessary before going any further with the plans.

According to DPH official Nancy Murphy, factors which would be taken into consideration include need, reasonableness of cost, the relative merit of the proposal, and compliance with certain standards.

The facility, to be built and run by the Mediplex Group, is proposed for 10.9 acres of Hillside Way near the Burlington town line. The group already runs several other such homes.

According to Mediplex health planner Michelle Horn, a site was purchased in Wilmington because "we feel Wilmington is in need of a nursing home." This need, especially for Medicaid patients, was confirmed through recent talks with local hospital staff and Council on Aging coordinator Edith Cunningham, Horn said.

"Mediplex is committed to quality care for all patients," she said, adding that her group would never put a facility in an area where that care would be jeopardized.

Though residents agreed there is a need for such a home, they objected to the chosen location on largely environmental grounds.

"We have more than one problem here," called out a resident, leading into a catalogue of concerns heard at a previous meeting between Mediplex and Wilmington citizens.

"We cannot afford another car on that street (Chestnut Street)," said Jane Spada. In the last 20 years since living the area, she said, traffic has been "horrendous." She also complained that the home, if built, would abut her property.

"I suggest you put it in your backyard; then you come and tell us we need it in our backyard,": Spada told Horn.

Dave Fitzgerald pointed out he was "worried about the patients," especially with no sewer line in the area and the great number of ambulance runs which would be required on a road that's too narrow and contains "many blind spots."

Homeowner Helen Corrigan was worried about ambulance traffic for another reason. She said they "go too fast and may hit my kids." She then questioned the town's wisdom in selling land to Mediplex without first taking neighbors' feelings into account.

Low water pressure, icy conditions on Chestnut Street, and other concerns came up for their share of scrutiny during the brief meeting.

"We're proceeding in a manner that I think is responsive," Mediplex project manager John Tressler assured residents. He explained he had spent the last few days talking to town officials about concerns voiced at the October 9 meeting.

Safety Officer Robert Shelley, he said, did not feel Chestnut had "an unusual number of accidents," even though residents pointed out a speed trap was recently set up on that road.

Water Dept. Superintendent Paul Duggan had told Tressler that, based on registered complaints and subsequent findings by his department, "there was adequate water pressure" above Hillside Way, something residents coughed at as untrue.

When questioned about a sanitation system, project engineer Ken Miller told audience members that perc tests and deep hole tests done on the site in the spring and fall were "positive" and would allow for a septic system to be put in. However, he added, they've only done a preliminary investigation and no final design plans have been made. The possibility of hooking into a Burlington sewer line may be ruled out, he stated, because he thought that town had a moratorium on doing something like this.

If the Mediplex Group is granted a certificate of need, the next step would be to seek a special permit from the Board of Appeals, allowing them to put a nursing home in an R60 zone.

Early morning fog When there's frost on the pumpkin, there's fog on the lake. The bathhouse at Silver Lake is barely visible through the early morning fog hanging over the water.

That was snow, says 'expert'

Monday's heavy frost was different things to different people. Motorists were faced with their first seasonal encounter with the ice scraper.

Gardeners took advantage of Sunday's nice weather, and picked some late crops which had survived previous light frosts. The frost on Monday morning killed many gardens.

Three-year-old Kristen Thomas had her own interpretation. Everything outside was white, and every kid knows what that means --snow!

Shortly before 8 a.m., she put on her boots and winter clothes, and was all ready to go out and play in the snow.

Her father, Dr. Michael Thomas, was unable to convince her that it was just frost.

Horribles Parade next Thursday

Wilmington Rec's 17th annual Horribles Parade will take place Thursday evening, October 31. Costumed creatures of all ages will gather by Rotary Park at 6:30 p.m. From there the scary mass of witches and goblins will creep up Church Street to the WHS tennis courts where they will eceive a commemorative Halloween ribbon and plenty of holiday treats.

The Great "Wiberg Squmpkin" will preside over the goings on again this year. There is no cost thanks to the Horribles Parade Committee, Kiwanis, Police Association, Town Employees Association, Rotary Club, Sciarrappa Farm, Sweetheart Plastics and the Recreation Department. Helpers, new and old, should contact Ron Swasey in the Rec office, 658-4270.

Overnight to New York

There are still a few seats available for Wilmington Recreation's second bus to New York City on December 7 and 8. Call the Recreation Department at 658-4270 for information.

$1,000 REWARD

The Board of Selectmen is offering a $500.00 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person(s) responsible for setting the fire which destroyed the carriage house at the High School football field on Sunday morning, October 13, 1985. The Wilmington Chamber of Commerce is offering an additional reward of $500.00 for this purpose.

Persons having information should contact the Wilmington Police Detective Bureau at 657-8082 or the Confidential Hot Line, 657-7149.

Travelling the world without leaving home

A new twist on the old armchair travel routine has caught on in the mid-80's as more and more familes across the U.S. become Host Families for English-speaking exchange students. Many of these families aren't free to travel themselves, and so they bring the world to their doorstep, making an adventurous youngster feel right at home and part of the family.

Cross-cultural exchanges like these are sponsored by the American Institute For Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation, whose offices are in Greenwich, Connecticut and San Francisco. "We have hundreds of teenagers from such countries as Spain, Germany, and Japan," said Paul A. Cook, Executive Director of the Foundation. "They are ready to come to America this fall to study at local high school if suitable Host Families can be found for them."

The benefits work in many ways. The American Host Family learns new customs, often with new ways of looking at things. The foreign student thrives on the interest and support of the American family, whose welcome and warmth assures the success of the exchange. The parents like the example set by a teenager who has mastered a foreign language and who wants to learn first-hand about another culture. The children enjoy having a live-in friend who shares their interests in sports, music, and fun.

"A very special benefit the Foundation offers," Cook added, "is scholarship support for Host Family members who wish to study abroad themselves after the exchange." Scholarships of up to $800 can be applied to international educational programs that can include Homestay experiences comparable to the one the family has offered themselves.

For more information on how to become a Host Family for a visiting exchange student, call the American Institute For Foreign Study Scholarship Foundation at (203) 869-9090 in Connecticut, (800) 243-4567 east of the Mississippi, (800) 458-7100 west of the Mississippi, or (800) 841-9208 in California.

Wilmington selectmen drop building restriction on lot

by Arlene Surprenant

Due to changing circumstances, homeowner Ralph DeLisle sought help from selectmen last Tuesday night in lifting a 17-year-old restriction on his property bordering Belmont Avenue and Beacon Street.

The restriction was placed, not on his original houselot, but on a second parcel of land purchased through the board of selectmen in 1968. It stated DeLisle could make the second lot part of his property but could not build on it in the future.

Attorney William Gustus, representing DeLisle, related that because of the demand for land in Wilmington and the difficulty in purchasing any on which to build a home, DeLisle wished to be released from the restriction. He would then turn four of the 2,500 square foot lots over to his son so that he may build a home. DeLisle actually owns six such lots (for a total of 15,000 square feet) in the second parcel and would retain the remaining two for himself.

Gustus pointed out there has been a precedent set by the board for lifting a restriction this year, there are no objections from neighbors, DeLisle gets no financial gain from the transaction, and the use would be "not consistent with area zoning."

Selectmen Rocco DePasquale and Jim Stewart aired two opposing views.

"This is an opportunity to keep townspeople within the town," said DePasquale, who felt it should be approved because it would benefit a lifelong resident and, at the same time, not create hardship on neighbors.

Stewart claimed granting this was unfair to other residents who bought land through the selectmen and might also want to lift restrictions. He called it "a dangerous precedent" that goes against the letter of the law in selling land to abutters.

He felt the former board of selectmen was "erroneous" in selling six lots as one parcel. he also felt it went against the intent of the recent moratorium, a moratorium placed on "the overall process of dealing with town owned land."

Bob Cain explained they were only addressing a change of use while DePasquale said it was his understanding the moratorium would affect only the future sale of town owned land and not be applicable in this case. In any case, added DePasquale, "we, as town fathers, have a responsibility to be flexible."

Gustus, in closing remarks, said that it is difficult to understand why his client should be penalized because of a wrong action by a previous board.

The board voted five to one to lift the restriction and ageed to take future cases on their own merit.

Must file subdivision plan

Edwin C. Hill of Tewksbury must file a subdivision plan, if he hopes to continue constructing homes off Elm Street in Wilmington. He must also get together with the town engineer and Richard Stuart, another developer, and complete the construction of Elm Street, into his subdivision, So he was told,a Tuesday night.

It was a dramatic evening before the Wilmington Board of Appeals, on October 22nd. The hearing room was crowded. There were witnesses standing around in the hall, awaiting their turn to get in.

The Hill cases, five of them, were not the first on the agenda. They were not called until 7:45 p.m.

Mr. Hill has been developing houselots off Elm Street, which goes westerly from Woburn Street, for several years. There is a subdivision plan dating back to 1916 which he has been able to use. Entry to the area, the board of appeals ruled several years ago, must be by Elm Street. There must be no connection with Lowell Steet the appeals board said.

Three members of the planning board were present because Mr. Hill seemed to them to be proposing to alter lot lines which were originally drawn 69 years ago. to change the lot lines means, to the planning board, that a new subdivision of land is being planned.

Hill told the board of appeals that he had filed a petition with the Land Court in Boston, to delete a section of Bay Street, one of the "paper" streets that leads up from Lowell Street. A 50 foot wide by 200 foot long section of the street was to be deleted. He was requesting a hearing for five lots of land he proposed to have as a result, the fifth lot being about 38,000 feet in area.

After Hill had finished a preliminary discussion others were allowed to speak.

Lloyd Brooks told the board that Elm Street had never been surfaced. Hill agreed. He had spoken about it with the town engineer. He had no deposit as a guarantee.

Richard Stuart, another builder, interrupted to say he had bought two lots, and Hill had never done any work. There were words, which the chairman stopped.

Sharon Kelley, a real estate broker, spoke up to say she had sold the home to Mr. Brooks, and that Elm Street is a mess. "This has not been resolved."

MacDonald said it was the number one question on his mind.

Ko Li, of Maple Street said that Hill prefers not to use Elm Street, and is using a bypass instead. "I put up a barrier, and it has been removed."

Hill told the board of appeals that "Elm Street is so bad" that he preferred to use other streets.

He had built no homes on Elm Street. He had brought in a water main, by that street, which had cost him $12,000. He had talked with the town engineer about it, but had made no deposit as a guarantee. Hill felt the man who built homes on Elm Street should be the man who finished the street.

"All the streets I build are outstanding."

Planning board members spoke for a few minutes, and then Hill resumed; He was intending to file new subdivision plans

Chairman MacDonald: "That is what I have been waiting to hear!"

Hill: "May I request a continuance (to a future date, ed.)?

MacDonald: "No, you may not sir. I consider this to be a subdivision."

The other board of appeals members spoke up, to vote the same way, unanimously.

MacDonald had the last words: "I am respectfully requesting you to get together with the town engineer and Mr. Stuart and get this road done."

The hearing lasted 22 minutes.

The other "big" case of the evening was an Official Map hearing on Stafford Street, which goes off Burlington Avenue. Richard Mitrano of Andover was represented by a young lady who introduced herself as Attorney LaFortune.

There are four lots involved in the first 500 feet, each of which conforms to the zoning bylaw, she told the board.

MacDonald was concerned with future development, and advised her and her client to get together with the Wilmington Planning Board, and work with that board to plan the future.

Some of the lands beyond 500 feet were described as "soupy" by Atty. LaFortune. She promised to "keep an open mind" and get together with the planning board.

Hits lottery for $1904

by Arlene Surprenant

Though it wasn't Megabucks, winning $1,904 in the Daily Numbers Game proved to be the next best thing for Wilmington resident Sandra Volpe.

Volpe, a paraprofessional in the Billerica school system and a creater of custom-made kites, hit the big bucks October 17. Her lucky number, 5312, was flashed on the 11 o'clock news as she "went crazy yelling that's my number." According to Volpe, her first reaction was to call family and friends, including her surprised husband Dennis, who was away on a business trip in Chicago at the time.

Prior to winning, Volpe had played the same number for two months. For her big win, she played the exact order for 50 cents and any order for 50 cents. Now, she says, she will continue to play the game, but may change her number. She has also won a few free tickets through Megabucks, though she has yet to hit it big in that game.

Most of her winnings will be held in reserve for a family trip to Canada or Disneyworld, though she might spend a little on herself, Volpe said with a smile.

When asked her advice for other would-be players, Volpe said to be conservative and stick to one number.

"I wish everyone would have this experience, though I would have been just as happy had it been $100," she said.

Volpe resides on Reed Street with her husband and two daughters and Marissa and Jenna, who think their mother's lucky win is "just great," thank you.

Five generations Five generations gathered recently in the chapel at Tewksbury Hospital to allow Mrs. Nellie Luzzato to meet her great-great-granddaughter, Crystal Cuneen Fougere. Holding the baby is her mother, Lisa Fougere of Medford. Mrs. Ellen Dukett (center) of Manning Street, Wilmington is the grandmother, and Mrs. Betty Henry of Woburn is the great-grandmother. The baby is not Mrs. Luzzatto's first great-great-grandchild, but is her first with five generations of mothers and daughters.

Jennie Peak engaged

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Peak of Marcus Road, Wilmington have announced the engagement of their daughter Jennie Louise Peak to Keith Leland Bazarnick of Sudbury.

Miss Peak, a 1980 graduate of Wilmington High School, received her bachelor's degree from the University of Lowell and is now employed at St. Joseph's Hospital as a registered nurse.

Her fiance is currently completing his studies at the University of Lowell while working at Control Equipment Corporation in Lowell.

A fall wedding is planned after which the couple will live in Nashua.

Tewksbury planners ask developer to increase parking at proposed storage warehouse site

Tewksbury Planning Board members asked the developer of a storage warehouse to revise his plans to accommodate additional parking and a wider turn lane for trucks. The proposal to build a condominium type storage warehouse on a parcel off Livingston Street near the intersection with Pinnacle Street is before planners for a special permit under the town's site plan review zoning bylaw.

Planners said October 15 they would like to see an increase in parking area on the "Tewksbury Junction" plans and have a wider pavement area to the rear of the building so trucks will better be able to use the proposed looped driveway. Planner Wilfred Lambert told developer David Sheehan and project surveyor William Troy that the proposal leaves the site too congested.

Sheehan has proposed placing 17 condominium warehouse units in a 21,000 square foot building on a parcel of land off Livingston Street. He plans to provide at least two parking spaces for each of the units and has shown a total of some 43 spaces on the plans.

He will market the units to tradesmen such as electricians and plumbers who he said would store their supplies and materials in the building. A sampling of some of the supplies and materials, he said, include plumbing fixtures, wall boards, conduits, and similar materials used in the trades.

Sheehan also said he envisioned that owners of the units would park their company trucks at the warehouse overnight, would report to the building in the morning and take the truck to their job site, leaving behind their personal car in the process. In answer to questions, Sheehan said it is possible that unit owners will ask employees to report to the building in the morning, leave their personal autos and leave the site for a job in the company truck.

It is that concept which planners showed concern over. They said there may not be enough parking on the site if employees leave their personal cars at the building during working hours.

The lot is just north of the railroad tracks and is on the east side of Livingston Street where it intersects with Pinnacle Street. The land abuts state hospital property.

The lot is rectangular in shape and would have access off Livingston Street. The side of the building would be visible as people drive down the access lane off Livingston Street. Vehicles would proceed forward on the looped roadway till reaching the far end of the lot where they would turn left and go around the end of the building and change direction.

The proposal, says Troy, meets with all town zoning requirements for parking and roadway turning radius. Some planners say the proposal meets with zoning requirements, but just barely.

Lambert said the proposal calls for developing the land to the fullest extent allowed under the zoning bylaw and does not address the need for additional parking that may be needed in the future. Lambert told Sheehan he felt the proposal was trying to cram too much on the lot and is "like trying to put 10 pounds into a five pound bag."

Planning Board Chairman Robert Sullivan said he was concerned with the turning radius to the rear of the building. He felt more space should be left so a trailer truck or large vehicle would have extra breathing room during the turn. Leaving the area the width shown on site plan drawings, he said, would make the turn a difficult one for trucks leaving the site after making a delivery and may pose a problem for others during the winter time when mounds of snow left from plowing would reduce the width even more.

Sullivan also told Sheehan that decreasing the unit size or number of units in the project will not have an adverse financial impact because if the project is "done right" the unit buyers would must likely meet a higher per unit asking price.

Planner Robert Fowler agreed the plan met requirements, but suggested that redesigning the building shape would leave additional space elsewhere for parking and an increased turning radius.

Sheehan and Troy agreed to review their plans, but reminded the board that preliminary plans had called for 19 units and only 36 parking spaces.

The drainage from the project will be carried through a series of pipes and swales and empty out into a 30 acre wetland on state land. The drainage proposal is being reviewed by the planning board's consulting engineering firm.

Lawyers' wigs Still too small to pick, these Shaggy Cap mushrooms will be about six inches tall by next week.

Watch for the 'lawyer's wig'

The last week of October is the time to watch for Coprinus Comatus, a tall mushroom or fungi which is often called the "lawyer's wig." Coprinus Comatus can easily be identified. It has a delicate taste, something like that of sweet acrons.

The term "lawyer's wig" comes from Britain, where attorneys, when they appear in court, wear a wig. The mushroom cannot be confused, in this part of the country, with any other. Another name for it is "shaggy cap."

The shaggy cap appears on lawns and in fields. It first is to be seen as a white cap, with shaggy-wooly scales. Left alone it grows to a height of about six inches, which is the best time for picking.

Shaggy caps often appear in clusters on a lawn. Rarely does it happen that they appear twice in the same spot. Some years ago shaggy caps were to be found on the lawn of the Wildwood School, in Wilmington, but they never again appeared on that lawn.

All varieties of Coprinus go through a process of auto-digestion, when they have reached maturity. As the mushroom produces spores the body of the mushroom degenerates and destroys itself, turning into a black liquid as it does so.

This is what happens to the shaggy mane. It should be picked just before it starts to digest itself, when it is about six inches tall. Cooking the shaggy mane, and other Coprini will produce the same black fluid, but there is nothing to worry about.There is no danger, and no changes in the flavor.

One way to cook them is to fry them in butter, with cut-up onions.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

The ongoing cleanup in the aftermath of Hurricane Gloria has been a massive undertaking by the Wilmington highway department, one that has been well done.

I don't question the abilities or willingness of the men doing the work, but I do question the manner in which the work was done.

It seems to me that the three large trucks that picked up brush must have cost a lot of gas alone, also to be considered is the hourly wages of the men involved.

Why wasn't the brush shredder used in the cleanup efforts?

I wuld think that by using the shredder you would be able to fit more brush in the trucks making fewer trips. The wood chips could be used ot landscape certain areas in the town. Less gas would be used and the cleanup time is lessened.

With the amount of logs that have been cut the wood could have been sold at a good price to help pay for the cleanup or the money could be used to fund the different holiday celebrations in town.

I realize that the cleanup is being funded by the federal government, but where is the money eventually coming from, the federal deficit?

If more effort were put into cutting corners financially, starting at the basic level of government, our town and our country would be in much better shape.

I think the decision not to use the shredder should come under the scrutiny of town management, and more ways to save money in town should be used.

Thank you for you time,
Dennis P. Hewitt

Correction

Last week's issue of the Town Crier carried a letter from the Wilmington Family Counseling Service listing the many artists who took part in the recent exhibit at the new headquarters of the counseling service.

Two artists were inadvertantly omitted from the listing, an oversight for which the counseling service offers a sincere apology.

The artists omitted were Tina Prentiss and Andrea Peters.

Executive sessions could become divisive issue

A controversy has surfaced within the Wilmington School Committee over the Open Meeting Law. School committee member Shirley Callan is challenging the committee's having met in executive session to discuss a pay increase for Paul Fleming, principal of Wilmington High School.

The reason given for the executive session was "collective bargaining." Mrs. Callan maintains that meeting to discuss the pay of one person is not collective bargaining. She also says that the district attorney agrees with her point. The school committee attorney is said to have the opinion that it does constitute collective bargaining.

Collective bargaining is one of seven cases in which the Open Meeting Law allows a governmental body to go into executive session.

Mrs. Callan is a firm believer in the basic tenet of the Open Meeting Law, that being that the public's business should be conducted in public. Although she did not raise it as a campaign issue when she ran for office this spring, her record as a member of the Wilmington Library Trustees is interesting for her use of that law.

In 1980-81, she was vice chairman of the library trustees, at a time when Prop. 2 1/2 was first being implemented. The library budget was under discussion, and there were different opinions as to how it should be cut.

The issue became so hot that the rest of the board decided to censure Mrs. Callan. In February 1981, the board met for the express purpose of voting that censure. The trustees each read a statement critical of her, and then voted to censure her.

Several of Mrs. Callan's supporters at the meeting observed that the statements read by the other trustees appeared to have all been typed on the same typewriter. This would indicate that they had met to discuss her censure, thus violating the Open Meeting Law. Some of the people present at the meeting reported this to the district attorney, and her censure was overturned. The entire board resigned, except Mrs. Callan.

The Open Meeting Law does not provide any personal penalty on those who violate the law, but does provide that any action taken in an illegal executive session can be overturned by the district attorney.

Whether Mrs. Callan will attempt to carry the principal's pay issue to that end remains to be seen.

It is quite interesting to have a person on the committee challenging the executive session. Most challenges to execu- tive sessions come from persons outside the committee, and with the disadvantage of not knowing exactly what happened in the executive session.

School committee members are quite upset that Mrs. Callan went to the press with details of the executive session. The committee will take up a code of ethics in future sessions, and will certainly be discussing the confidentiality of executive sessions.

Where this will lead is not known, but the potential exists for strong disagreement. Although the Open Meeting Law is important and must be obeyed, it would be unwise to allow discussions to proceed to the point where the school committee cannot function.

Wilmington solved its TCE problem

Pure drinking water is a subject today that is being discussed both by the printed press and by television stations. Time magazine a few weeks ago discussed the subject quite fully.

On October 15 the American Broadcasting Company (ABC) featured a program nationwide to discuss trichloroethylene (TCE). TCE is a substance that is used as a degreaser in many industrial and automotive applications. It is also used in cleaning kitchen drains and septic systems.

TCE is said to cause cancer. A very small amount can ruin a water system, the country has been told. The ABC program discussed problems all over the country. There was no hope, in the real sense of the word, in the program.

There is a brighter side to the picture. ABC never mentioned it.

Maybe some of the town fathers in Wilmington, Mass. should invite the producers from the ABC to visit a place where TCE did exist, in the water supplies, and has been eradicated. The Butters Row treatment plant was in the design stage when TCE was discovered in the Chestnut Street wellfield. The plans were modified, and the treatment plant was designed to eliminate TCE from water. It was the first treatment plant in the nation to successfully remove TCE from groundwater.

A report on such a visit could be good news in, say, Arizona, where ABC found much to be at fault.

Therefore, all Halloween party goers wishing to attend the K of C sponsored party should report to the Youth Center at Livingston Street playground.

Prizes will be awarded during the night at each location. There will be prizes given for the best costumes with judging being held in various age groups from 1-year-old to 10-years-old. There will also be a host of games played at each of the locations during the night and each child will receive a trick or treat bag.

Model tarmac Airplanes owned by the members of the 495th-RC Squadron are lined up on the ground, while others are being flown by squadron members.

Tewksbury's 'model' airport

The 495th Air Squadron has a base in Tewksbury, Mass.

No, it is not at the Tew-Mac Airport off Livingston Street. It is, instead, in back of the cemetery off East Street.

The 495th, however, is not your ordinary air squadron. It is a special name and has a special function. The 495th is, in fact, a radio controlled squadron, and the letters "RC" always follow the numbers. The numbers arise from the fact that the squadron's 117 members live along Route 495.

All the planes in the squadron are model planes, made by the members, and are controlled while in flight by radio signals.

Roy Crane of McDonald Road, Wilmington is one of the "pilots" of the 495th-RC Squadron. He is also Scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop 58 in Wilmington.

Roy brought his troop to the airport behind the cemetery, about a month ago, to watch the airplanes take off, fly around, and then land, from orders given on the ground. It was a lot of fun for the Scouts.

And it was a lot of fun for Roy and the other members of the 495th-RC Squadron.

Tewksbury planners review office/retail building site plan

Tewksbury Planners are currently reviewing a proposal to build a retail/office building to the rear of Nolan's Restaurant on Main Street. The board viewed the site plan drawings and heard the proposal at a September 23 public hearing.

Because the proposal is to build a two story structure behind Nolan's Restaurant on Main Street, the developer, George T. Nawn, requested the planners vote to issue a special permit to allow more than one commercial building on the same lot. The board voted unanimously to issue that permit at an October 15 meeting.

The board, however, must still approve of the site plan design and issue a site plan special permit before the project can proceed.

The "Village Landing" proposal calls for the construction of a two-story 15,300 square foot building to the rear of Nolan's Hearthside Restaurant on Main Street. The building will be placed in back of and off to the side of Nolan's and will be partially behind the Bradford Building and the Gasland gasoline station.

The overall site plan design is to restructure the whole lot to allow enough parking for both Nolan's and the new building. The overall plan shows a total of 161 parking spaces, 108 of which are designated to serve the retail/office building and 53 to serve the restaurant. The 161 spaces provided on the entire lot meets the amount of spaces required under the town's zoning bylaw.

Planners agreed the new parking layout will improve current parking and traffic flow conditions on the site. The plan shows a driveway system that will require cars to enter the site on the Gasland side of Nolan's. Nolan's parking will be toward the front of the lot and on all four sides of that building. People accessing the new building will have to travel to a rear parking lot. Cars will leave the site on the opposite side of Nolan's building.

The proposal will widen the travel lanes currently in Nolan's Restaurant parking lot and will also define the parking spaces more clearly.

Few residents attended the hearing for the building. The ones who did wanted assurances that traffic from the site would not be directed toward Newton Avenue.

Boy Scouts of Troop 58 watch the radio controlled "flyby" of the airport.

Tewksbury health board covers cost to treat safety personnel exposed to virus

The Tewksbury Board of Health Monday night voted to pay for six injections of hemoglobin given to members of the Tewksbury Fire Department and Tewksbury Police who came into contact with the blood of a man infected with hepatitis B strain. The board heard the story of the incident from Health Officer William McMenimen.

An out-of-town resident who is employed at a local food establishment was injured about three weeks ago during a dispute. According to reports, he suffered a cut on his head after being hit with a bottle.

Two policemen called to the scene attempted to stop the bleeding. Three firemen called to the scene in a fire truck and two emergency medical technicians called to the scene with the town ambulance also attempted to treat the victim.

All seven men were splattered with the blood of the injured man while they tried to treat him. It wasn't until later that it was learned that the injured man was suffering from hepatitis B, an infectious virus in the blood.

Any person with a cut or bruise on his body, and who comes into contact with blood from a person suffering from hepatitis B can himself become infected, McMenimen told the Board of Health. Therefore, it was necessary, he felt, to inject serum into those seven men to prevent that possibility.

Six of the men received hemoglobin injections on October 11. The seventh refused to receive one. The cost of each injection was $198.50, McMenimen reported.

Those six men are each to receive another hemoglobin injection after two weeks.

McMenimen called health officers in Boston for further advice. He was told that the ambulance should be washed out, and then wiped down with paper towels and the towels should then be burned. It is unknown whether the ambulance was splattered with the victim's blood, but the cleansing measures were taken.

Upon learning of their contact with a hepatitis B infected person, some of the firemen burned their uniforms. One fireman and both of the policemen had their uniforms washed, which, McMenimen said, took care of any problem with hepatitis B. There have been no reported out breaks of the strain since the incident.

McMenimen said he had talked with three different physicians about the incident and he got three different answers. In every case, the physicians agreed that no person suffering from hepatitis B should be a food handler.

As McMenimen was relating the story to the health board the person involved came into the meeting and sat down to listen to the discussion. He agreed that he was not to touch food. All the work he is now doing, he said, was in another class than that of food handler.

He is under the care of a physician, and is to report for further treatment in about two weeks. Sometimes he feels well, and on other days he does not feel so good.

Hepatitis B, it is said, is not spread from one person to another very easily. It takes contact with the blood or other secretions of the infected person to have a transmittal of the virus.

Joan Dunlevy, health board member, asked that Mr. McMenimen be certain that the material he has on handling such an incident be so stored as to be available to any health board member. Things could happen while he was out of town, say on a weekend, and she felt that the proper advice should be readily available in the future.

A visit to old Mystic Seaport

by Arlene Surprenant

Mystic Seaport is the perfect place to while away a lovely fall weekend, as four Town Crier staff members recently discovered. Our visit coincided with one of the warmest September weekends in memory as we joined approximately 200 other professonals at the New England Press Association annual fall convention in Mystic, Connecticut.

It took only a few short hours for us to succumb to the quaint charm of Connecticut's most heralded tourist attraction. Though we put up at the Ramada Inn, most of our time was spent outside exploring the nooks and crannies of this beautiful seaport. Mystic, by the way, that not only thrives on a burgeoning tourist trade, but has strong ties to an intriguing past evident in its architecture and homes, traditions and way of life. To develop a kinship with it, it's necessary to don a pair of sturdy walking shoes and cover the town from one end to the other.

One of our favorite places turned out to be the picturesque Seaport Museum, a living re-creation of a thriving seaport village on the busy Mystic River.

For two days, we meandered down an oyster shell waterfront path past a stretch of buildings and tall ships that tell the story of Mystic's glorious shipbuilding past.

Masts criss-cross a clear blue sky as a strolling sailor sings a rollicking sea chantey. We board the Charles Morgan, the only survivor from a fleet of wooden whalers, and learn about harpooning the great whales and storing the oil in similar ship's holds. We stroll the deck of the three-masted training ship, the Joseph Conrad, and later listen to a guide expound on the renovation of the Gloucester fishing schooner L.A. Dunton. For relaxation and panoramic beauty, there's nothing like a half hour cruise on the S.S. Sabino, the last coal-fired, steam-powered ferry.

We are transported back to the 1800's in any number of shops and galleries.

We learn about the merits of a John Rushton rowboat in the boat building shop. We discover that two leeches, along with other old-fashioned remedies, could be purchased for a quarter (or rented for less) in the 1870's pharmacy.

We smell freshly ground coffee in the country store, watch casks being assembled in the cooperage, and smile on youngsters engrossed in antique toys in the childrens museum. We view scrimshaw displays, ships figureheads, an assortment of maritime artifacts, and a re-created ship's cabin from the luxurious Benjamin F. Packard.

We spent hours at the museum and still missed many sights. Afterward, we take in Olde Mistick Village, a collection of more than 60 shops featuring gifts, clothing, and unusual goods from around the world.

The distinguishable feature of the village is its pastoral setting and careful intermingling of neat buildings and secluded rest areas designed to restore both weary feet and tired minds. We stroll past white, black, and green ducks blissfully swimming in a pond fronting the candy store. A peaceful island oasis complete with trees, flowers of every description, and a nearby waterwheel, this spot seems perfectly in tune with the white buildings encircling it. Further down the path are a gazebo, small white chapel, and an entrancing doll museum.

As far as shops go, we are especially drawn to the Last Straw Wicker Shack and its 99 cent bargains, Hearts and Whales Unlimited, and Zekes, a men's shop specializing in executive gifts such as a brass kaledioscope for the man who has everything. Each shop seems a world unto itself, a feast for the eye as your attention is drawn to items artfully arranged for sale on walls, floor, and ceiling.

In the vicinity of Olde Mistick Village are the unrivaled Mystic Aquarium (which, regretfully, we did not get to see); the Steak Loft restaurant, featuring some of the hottest chili known to man; and a lovely off-the-beaten-path Christmas shop with tinware, hand-blown glass ornaments, and all manner of holiday decorations offered at rock bottom prices.

To get a sense of the real Mystic, though, you must see the scenic heart of the whole area: downtown Mystic. There actually is no town of Mystic - it is a village located in two towns, Groton and Stonington.

We spent some delightful moments on the rare bascule bridge, a drawbridge which is raised hourly for a steady stream of traffic on the Mystic River. In the water below, schools of fish chased into town by the bluefish make swirling patterns and occasionally jump in the distance.

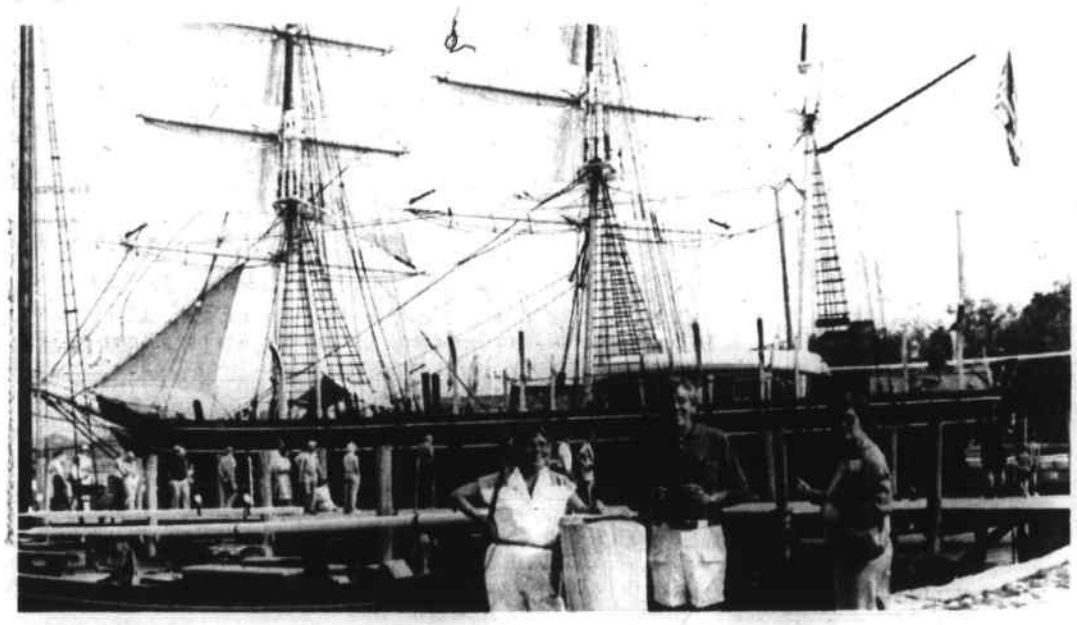

We tore ourselves away long enough to browse in specialty shops with such appealing names as mystical Toys, A Stitch in Time, Good Hearted Bears, and the Beggars Roost. Looking around, we see the whole district is intersected by quiet back streets and handsome 19th century homes built during the town's seafaring heyday.

On the river, ships and fishing boats stretch as far as the eye can see. A grey condominium with gaily colored windsocks intrudes at the water's edge and seems oddly out of place amidst its more sedate neighbors.

A little further on, past the downtown area in nearby Noank, is Abbott's, one of our last stops and home of some of the sweetest fresh lobster around.

Abbott's, a rustic type restaurant complete with its own lobster pound, hugs the shoreline and enjoys the distinction of being one of the few New England eateries recognized in Yankee magazine. Under a clear night sky, all conference attendees were treated to a succulent clambake there and a chance to say good-bye to friends both old and new.

As the night drew to its inevitable close, we prepared to say good-bye to Mystic as well, and the river which played such an important part in its glorious past. A river which, even now, continues to make Mystic what it is today.

Mystic Seaport

It's YOUR Money

by Joyce Brisbois
Certified Public Accountant

You've got a little more than two months left in which to install some energy savers in your hame and have Uncle Sam help you pay for them. Only expenditures made through 1985 qualify for tax credit, though you can put off using the credit until the end of 1987.

You can get a tax credit to cover 15 percent of the first $2,000 you spend to buy and install qualifying insulation or other energy-saving components in your principal residence (located in the U.S. and build before 1977). Another credit -- 40 percent of the first $10,000 of cost -- is available for purchasing and installing renewable energy source property, such as solar energy systems. The maximums are cumulative; you can't take all the credits every year.

Because of some tax form errors in the past years, some people who got tax credits for installation of renewable energy sources paid for with non-taxable grants or subsidized financing may be entitled to larger credits. If you claimed such a credit in 1982, '83 or '84, ask your accountant if it is advisable to file an amended return.

Brought to you as a public service by Joyce K. Brisbois, C.P.A., 8 Middlesex Ave., P.O. Box 176, Wilmington, MA 0187 658-5034.

Old and new pastors greet vistors

Fr. Joseph Blaney, O.M.I, now pastor of the Immaculate Conception Church in Lowell, returned to St. William's for a Mass of Thanksgiving on September 28.

Welcomed visitors at the Mass were Stan and Maddy Greenland of Tewkesbury, Gloucestireshire, England, who are shown with Fr. Blaney and the new St. William's Pastor, Fr. George Croft O.M.I. (left).

Fr. Hollywood returns

Past St. William's Church Pastor Fr. Patrick Hollywood (center) came back to Tewksbury to help celebrate the church's 50th anniversary. Fr. Hollywood is currently pastor of a church in Grand Rapids, Michigan He is shown here outside the church following the Mass celebrated by Bernard Cardinal Law September 28 with, from left ot right, Dorothy and Albert Pongonis, John Bemis and Town Treasurer Lewis Tremblay.

50th anniversary keeps St. William's busy

The last month has provided a rare opportunity for St. William's parishioners to meet a little of the new, a little of the old, a bit of the prominent, and a 'bit of the British. All this happens just as the church celebrates it 50th anniversary.

Among the highlights at the church last month were, of course, the visit of Bernard Cardinal Law, the return of former Pastor Father Joseph Blaney, O.M.I., the arrival of new Pastor Father George Croft, O.M.I., the departure of Father Ron Chaison, O.M.I., the arrival of Father Michael Amesse, O.M.I., and the return of former Pastor Father Patrick Hollywood.

Also among recent highlights was the hosting of two English visitors that Fr. Blaney and a contingent of Tewksbury residents met in Tewkesbury, England last year.

It was for the latter occasion that Fr. Blaney returned for his visit. When he did return, judgement was passed upon his six year pastorate.

"It is a hard act to follow," Fr. Croft told the congregation.

Father Joe, as he is called by many, returned to St. William's for a Mass of Thanksgiving and to welcome visitors Stan and Maddy Greenland of Tewkesbury, Gloucestireshire, England, both of whom were warmly applauded by parishioners.

Fr. Blaney had led a group of Tewksbury resident to their namesake town in England last year during Tewksbury's 250th Anniversary. The Greenlands repaid that visit with a three week stay of their own in America.

The Greenlands have since returned to their homeland, but have sent a note to The Town Crier.

"We would like to thank you for the warm welcome you gave us, both personally, and through the columns of the Town Crier. We are now trying hard to settle down to the routine of daily life here in Tewkesbury, England, and it has not been easy after all the experiences of our three weeks in your beautiful part of America. We were envious of [their daughter, ed.] Julia's boyfriend Maurice, (whom we realise we never properly introduced to you, as Dr. Maurice Southworth) because he is still in America working as a research scientist," the Greenlands wrote.

"We are now eagerly awaiting the return from the film processors of the many photos we took. These, together with the diary notes we kept while on holiday [vacation, ed.] will provide us with a permanent reminder of a truely memorable time," they added.

Newest clergyman

The Rev. Michael Amesse, a native of Montreal, is the newest clergyman at St. William's shown here talking with Lillian Ferroli. Fr. Amesse comes to Tewksbury from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

Joe burns Lions

TMHS senior receiver Joe Vecchi (22) cuts back to the middle of the field for a good gain in Sunday's 28-0 Redmen victory over Chelmsford. See story, other photos on page 12 of the sports section.

TMHS harriers maintain momentum

Last week the Tewksbury High School cross-country teams kept their momentum going. The boys team demolished Andover and Billerica on the Billerica home course, the girls team won a forfeit victory over Andover and fought Billerica to a 28-28 tie.

The top 10 in the boys 2.7 mile race was dominated by Redmen. Andover's Jon Yezerski and Billerica's Steve Lee took the top two positions, but then it was all Tewksbury.

Bob Busch strode home in third, Jeff Smith finished fourth, Ed Piscopo grabbed fifth, Brian Tremblay moved up through the pack to take sixth, and Dave Kelleher showed he is becoming a solid part of the top five by taking eighth. The team scores were Tewksbury 21, Billerica 36, Tewksbury 20, Andover 37.

So complete was Tewksbury's domination of the tri-meet that seven of Tewksbury's runners finished ahead of the fifth runners of both Andover and Billerica. Steve Ellwood was TMHS sixth man, and Eric Meininghaus was number seven.

The victories brought Tewksbury's record to four wins and three losses. Perhaps more significant, the quality of the performances and the close grouping of the top five indicate that perhaps the Tewksbury High cross-country team might be able to have some noteworthy acheivements in the upcoming state meets.

In the girls' tri-meet, Peggy Forsyth put forth an outstanding effort to finish third. The meet looked like a sure loss for Tewksbury however, as Billerica surrounded Peggy with runners, one ahead of her and two behind her.

It was Tewksbury's depth that saved the day however. Krissie Connor, Paula Torode, Renee Juchnevics and Kristin Conley ran hard to get the next four places and Kim Marshall, running on mostly courage over the last quarter mile, pulled ahead of Billerica's fifth runner.

Kim's effort handed Billerica another point and enabled Tewksbury to salvage a tie for the meet.

Coming up this week are tough contests against Lowell and Central Catholic for the boys and Lowell for the girls. On Saturday both teams travel to Bradley Palmer Park in Hamilton for the Northern Area Championship Meet. This year, for the first time, seventh and eighth grade runners from Tewksbury Junior High School will also compete in a special race for that age group at Northern Area.

TMHS booters complete incredible schedule

The Tewksbury varsity soccer squad recently completed an incredible eight games in 14 days schedule. Friday Tewksbury travels to Billerica and on Wednesday, October 30, Tewksbury concludes its regular season by hosting a young, but proud Dracut team.

The Dracut game will start at 3 p.m. Highlights of the past two weeks varsity and junior varsity soccer games include:

Tewksbury 9 Dracut 0

Dracut played hard, but was no match for the Redmen, who received three unassisted goals from junior Ed Sipowicz, playing the forward position for the first time this season. Junior forward Sam Dias added two goals, his first unassisted, his second assisted by junior forward Todd Simas.

Simas from junior back Bob Field scored the first goal of the second half, senior tri-captain Marc Masone from senior Keith Tower scored the team's seventh goal.

Freshmen Keith Krugh and sophomore Tim Quinn combined for their first goal and first assist, respectively, while Quinn scored his first goal and the team's ninth on an assist layed out beautifully by Masone.

The Tewksbury jv's defeated their Dracut counterparts on goals by Tommy Walsh, his 11th of the season with an assist going to fellow freshmen Jim Pollard; freshmen Derek Heartquist, again from Pollard; freshmen Stephen Picano on an assist from goalie Chris Stys; freshmen Jim O'Callaghan from freshmen Doug Fowler; and the final goal from another freshmen duo, Robbie Williams from Picano. Also playing well for the jv's was freshmen Derek Correale.

Chelmsford 6 Tewksbury 0

A 1-0 halftime deficit was no indication of a second half letdown which would find the Redmen at the end of a 6-0 score. Chelmsford scored the game's first goal midway through the first half when an unmarked Chelmsford player was allowed to dribble 30 yards toward the net before unleashing a long shot over Tewksbury goalkeeper Ricky Heartquist into the upper corner of the net.

From this point on until the end of the half, Tewksbury unleased its own shot barrage, only to come up empty handed. With momentum seemingly in their favor starting the second half, the Redmen went on a course of self-destruction. Injuries to two key players along with another starter out with the flu bug started to take its toll.

With a makeshift defense now in front of Heartquist, missed coverages and a lack of communication gave Chelmsford two quick and easy goals. Before the game was over and two underclassmen goalies later, Chelmsford had scored three more goals on an inexperienced defense.

The one bright spot was Bob Field, who for much of the second half was the only experienced back for Tewksbury on the field.

The Tewksbury jv's also lost, 2-0, but in the process played an even game with the young Lions. Several outstanding saves by the Lions' netminder, along with two fluke goals by Chelmsford, contributed to the loss. Several Redmen played extremely well, including freshmen goalie Chris Stys, forward Tommy Walsh, and fullbacks Robbie Williams and Stephen Knight. Dave Bufano and Ronnie Perrin, both sophomores, also had spectacular efforts for the Redmen.

Tewksbury 7 Lawrence 1

Tewksbury went with all underclassmen in this game against an undermanned but determined Lawrence squad. With Lawrence having no jv team, Tewksbury brought up jv high scorer Tommy Walsh, along with fullback Patrick McCaffery and freshmen goalie Chris Stys for their first varsity exposure. Walsh wasted little time in showing his scoring prowess, as he put the Redmen ahead on an assist from junior forward Ed Sipowicz.

Junior forward Sam Dias scored an unassisted goal to give the Redmen a 2-0 lead. Freshmen midfilder Keith Krugh scored the Redmen third, and the half's last goal on an assist from Walsh, Sipowicz scored the first goal of the second half on an assist from Dias before Lawrence scored its only goal of the game.

Fellow sophomores Marc Paglia and Jeff Stone combined for the next goal and assist respectively, while juniors Sam Dias and Nick Grund had respective hands in the team's sixth goal. Junior John Fleury, who had numerous chances all day, finally got his goal and the last of the game on an assist from Stone.

Chris Stys played extremely well in his first game as a varsity goalie, while freshmen back Pat McCaffery played agressively in his first start. Other commendable efforts came from forward sophomore Tim Quinn and excellent and confident performances from backs Tim McCaffery and Bob Field, both juniors.

Andover 2 Tewksbury 0

Tewksbury and Andover waged an even battle right down the line for 75 minutes, with several chances missed by both teams, but unfortunately for the Redmen, a game is 80 minutes long, resulting in a 2-0 loss. Tewksbury, trying to adjust to key injuries, played an untypical, wait for the break type game and was doing the job extremely well.

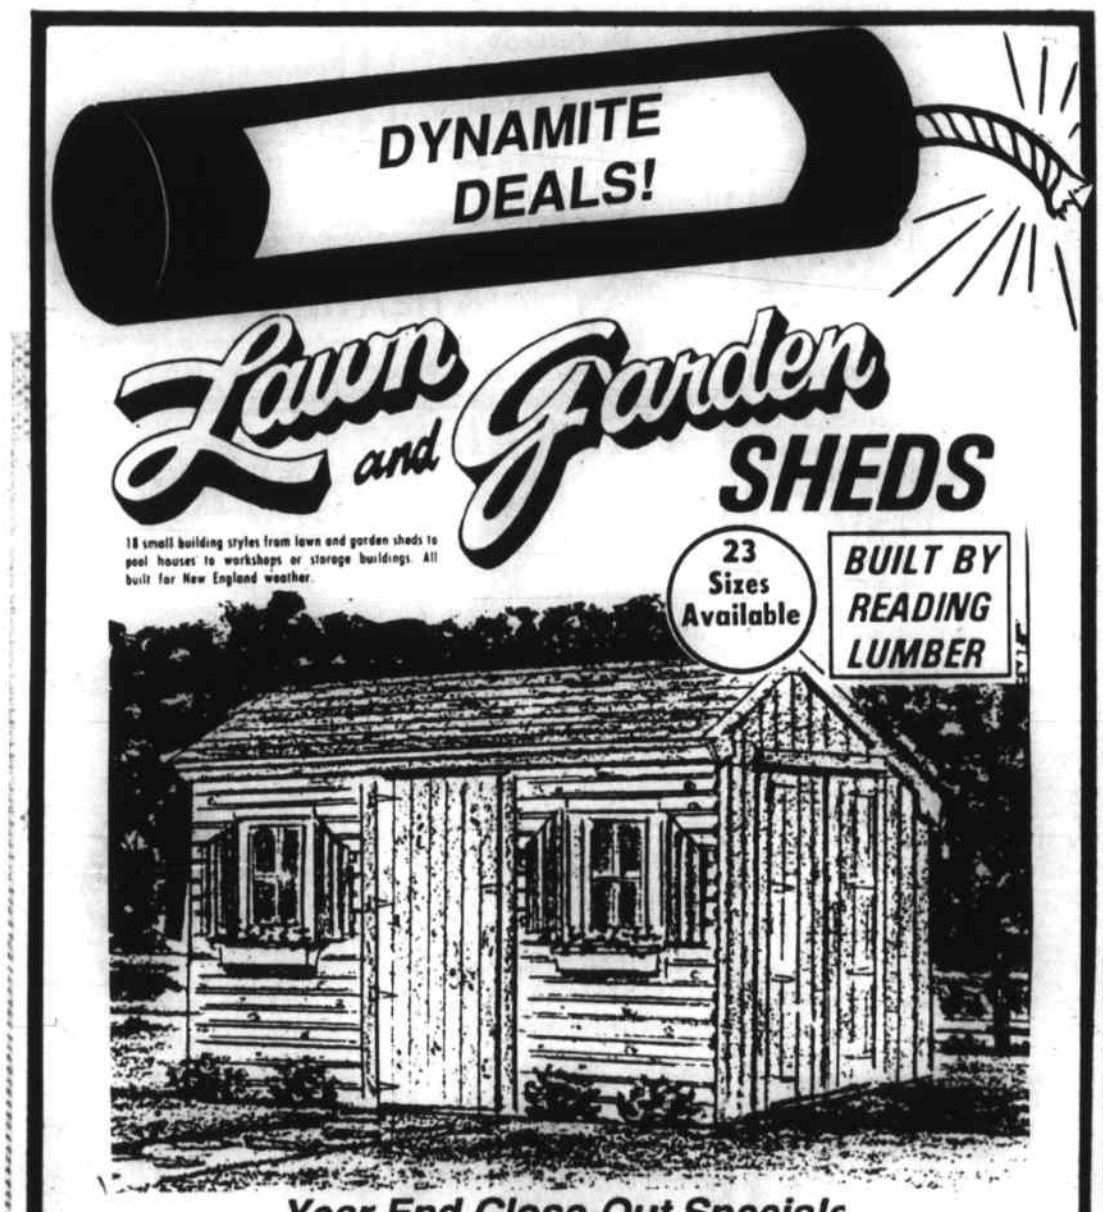

A 0-0 halftime score was indicative of the play, as neither team was able to sustain an offense. Tewksbury had a golden chance midway through the second half on an indirect kick eight yards from the net, only to have a shot by senior Marc Masone headed away.

As the clock wound down to five minutes to go, a moment of indecision resulted in an obstruction call on the Redmen four yards away from the net. Andover converted its best chance of the game and the only chance it would need. With 30 seconds to go in the game, Andover scored its second goal, as it capitalized on the Redmen sending most of their team on offense, leaving a numerically disadvantaged defense.

Outstanding for the Redmen was senior tri-capt Marc Masone, usually the team's best forward, converted to defense for this key game. Seniors Joey Wester and Nario Simao also played well in a disappointing result

The Tewksbury junior varsity, which had lost to Andover, 5-0 in

Another shutout

Linebacker Bob Dunlay (67) and the Redmen defense posted their third straight shutout in Sunday's cruise past Chelmsford. The TMHS defense has allowed just 23 points all season.

Rough going

Wilmington senior running back Tony Cutone has trouble getting untracked in Saturday's loss to Lawrence. The Wildcats will be looking to rebound at Central Catholic Saturday.

its first game, found itself leading twice, 1-0 on a goal by Ronnie Perrin with an assist going to Mike Cunningham, and 2-1, with Jim Pollard scoring from Ronnie Perrin.

Andover eventually won with its more experienced sophomore-junior team, but the Redmen of the future continued to play excellent soccer. Dave Bufano at stopper, Robbie Williams at sweeper, Joe Seely at midfield and Chris Stys in net, all played well.

Tewksbury 3 Lowell 1

The Redmen, in an intense battle for first place in the small school division with Methuen, needed a victory desperately in a makeup game at Lowell Monday morning, Oct. 14, Tewksbury was able to come away from Cawley Stadium in Lowell with a hard fought 3-1 victory over the Red Raiders. Keith Krugh, a freshmen midfielder, converted a penalty kick at the 13 minute mark of the first half after good Redmen pressure by junior wing Sam Dias.

League leading scorer Joe Bertos, then lost his defender to tie the score for Lowell at 1-1.

Sophomore midfielder Jeff Stone scored his fifth goal of the year for the game winner, taking a feed from Ed Sipowicz, who was playing wing at the time. Junior wing Kyle Favreau, back from an injury vs. Chelmsford, iced the game with a rebound goal off the Lowell goalie.

Junior stopperback Ricky LeDuc played his best game as a Redmen, as after Bertos scored, LeDuc took over the job of marking Bertos, holding the gifted scorer to only a couple of weak shots the rest of the way. Also playing well for Tewksbury were backs Bob Field and Tim McCaffery, with McCaffery subbing for injured starter senior Jim Latta.

The Tewksbury jv's improved their record to 7-4-0 with a similar 3-1 victory over the young Red Raiders. High scoring Tommy Walsh added goals 12 and 13 to his total, as he scored the first unassisted and put in the second off a pass from Ronnie Perrin.

Dave Bufano scored the final Redmen goal directly off a corner kick. Playing well for the Redmen were Joe Seely and Mike Cunningham at midfield, Rob Williams and Pat McCaffery at back, and wings Brian Anderson and Jim Pollard.

Methuen 3 Tewksbury 1

In a battle for Small School supremity, the Methuen Rangers put a little breathing room between themselves and the Redmen, as they held on to win a physically though 3-1 battle. Methuen had just eight shots on net the entire game, but they scored on three and that's how games are won.

Methuen scored in similar fashion on both goals, as after losing their defender, a Ranger forward crossed the ball into the far upper corner of the net. Tewksbury put goalkeeper Ricky Heartquist on the frontline for the second half and the Redmen seionr tri-captain scored Tewksbury's only goal off a pass from fellow capatin Marc Masone.

Tewksbury had several chances to tie the game, but for the second game in a row, the Methuen goakkeeper cam eup with the key saves. Playing well for the Redmen for the second game in a row was stopper back Ricky LeDuc, with sophomore backup goalkeeper Danny Fiore also looking confident.

The Tewksbury junior varsity squad continued to roll, as with 10 minutes to go in their game, high scoring Tommy Walsh netted the game winner on a pass from the team's second high scorer Jim Pollard to give the junior Redmen a 2-1 victory. The game's outstanding player, Billy Martin scored Tewksbury's first goal unassisted. Also playing well for Tewksbury were Ron Kinzler, Ronnie Perrin, Dave Bufano and Rob Williams.

Tewksbury Youth Hockey

The Tewksbury B-2 team sponsored by Realty World played an exciting game with an outstanding Billerica team.

The game ended in a 4-4 tie. Tewksbury tied the game with 30 seconds remaining on a goal by Mark Aylward assisted by Mike Fiore. Also scoring for Tewksbury were David Sledz, Tommy Verrill and Joe Carey.

Billy Wareham and Steve Picano played a strong defensive game. Goalie Jobe Post made many outstanding saves.

Hard work pays off for Bobby Williams

Bobby Williams has worked hard this past month, secretly training with Richie Bova on the Reading tennis courts. Like the best competitors, he never accepted his defeat earlier to Steven Cutone, but worked all the harder to get back to his long held position of number one.

This past Sunday Bobby extended his reign in Wilmington as the king of the courts with a solid 6-2-7-6 (5-3) win over the plucky youngster Steven Cutone.

Bobby came out swinging in the first set and quickly took a lead of 3-0 before Steven knew what hit him. Things started to even up a bit, but Bobby was still very strong to finish out the set.

Bobby started tiring in the second set, but was in control until Steven broke his serve at 4-3 in the second set. It then became a race to the finish, Steven had the strength and endurance (his soccer training helped) but Bobby had the desire, skill and experience. He hung on to win the Wilmington Tennis Club's 1985 Men's Singles Championship.

Bobby showed about 25 spectators that he's still the best. I think Steven learned a few things Sunday.

The club saw its' best tennis match in many years, and hopefully these two will keep going at it for many more seasons.

There was some other tennis the past four weeks. The club had over 35 youngsters participate in thejunior tournament, and there was a doubles tournament as well.

Diana Holmes and Jerry Bishop retained their one and two positions on the women's singles ladder with a fine tournament finals match.

Diane won with a score of 6-3, 6-4 to maintain her dominance of the woman's side of the club. Jerry played some of her best tennis, and with a score of 4-4 in the second set, did have a good chance at an upset over Diana.

Judy Conant played some good tennis, beating Janice Rudnicki to make it to the semifinals before losing to Diana. Nancy Newhouse also played in the semifinal match.

In the men's singles tournament, there were some other excellent performances. Tim Curran had some big wins against Paul Greco and Bob Perry (No. 4 seed) to make it to the semifinals.

Pat Hoffman got some revenge against Richie Bova (No. 3 seed) and also made it to the semis. Pat remembered their last match was also at 8 a.m. on a Sunday morning in the singles tournament three years ago (Richie winning). Wendall Holmes and Chris Archiero also played well and made it to the quarterfinals

In the men's Division II tournament, Mike Forestiere beat Greg Bracisca 6-4, 6-2 in the finals. Both players are young, and should give top players some good competition next year. Mike beat Tom O'Malley in three sets to make to the finals, while Greg beat Don Protopapas in his semifinal match.

Doubles action

In the men's doubles tournament, Dave Kwiatkowski and Tim Curran, old rivals on the boys junior ladder, teamed up to easily defeat most of the other teams.

The runners-up were Chris Archiero and Mike Stemmler, who lost to the young turks, 6-3, 6-2 in the finals.

The only team to give the kids a go was Barry Cahill and Tony Page. They lost 7-5, 5-4 in the first round.

In the women's doubles final, Nancy Newhouse and Janice Rudnicki teamed up to beat Diana Holmes and Jerry Bishop. What started off as a real cliff hanger - nail biter close match, 7-6 first set dwindled to an easy win in the second set 6-2 (goes to show that first and second singles doesn't always make the best doubles).

Junior tournament
Boys Division

You may have seen some strange looking tennis players and matches on local Channel 6 a couple of weeks ago as you flipped through your tv channels, most likely paying no attention.

If you did pause a bit, you may have noticed the cracked courts, falling apart nets and very faint lines. (the courts do need a little maintenance). But if you did linger to watch, you would have seen a bunch of kids playing their darndest and having a lot of fun at the WTC Junior Tournament

David Shanteler won the boys A Division in a close match (6-1, 2-6, 7-6) over Sean Marsh, who had beaten David earlier this summer to win the boys top ladder position. Both Sean and David are very good players and should do well on the high school team next year with Steven Cutone.

Mark Kwiatowski and Bill Burns played well, making it to the semifinals. Bill finished second on the ladder and Mark had to beat Chris Wright in the quarterfinals. Chris wound up in third on the ladder.

Eric Eisenberg couldn't make it to the tournament, but finished fourth on the ladder and was the top 13-year-old on the club.

Jim Magliozzi won the consolation round over big Mike Lombard in a good match 7-5, 6-2. Jim might have done well in the main draw, but had to default his first match because of a soccer match.

Also playing well in the tournament were Chris Allen, Steve Edmonds, Anthony Barletta, John McGrath, Steven Killilea, Mark Vigliotti, Doug Micheaud and Kevin Shanteler

In the boys' B Division, Jeff Stevenson won the finals in a close match over Sean Demaggio (6-3, 7-5). Both Jeff and Sean are new to the club this year hence, they're in the B division. They played so well that they have seen their last B tournament.

Steven Toto won the consolation round over Joe McFayden (6-3, 7-5).

Other youngsters playing very well in the tournament were Sean Keogan, Scott Tuxbury, kerry McAuliffe, Eric Endahl, Jim Medeiros and Wendall Holmes.

Girls Division

The girls showed as much talent as the boys in this tournament. The only problem is getting them to play more during the summer in the ladder matches.

Maureen Robinson played quite a bit this summer, and it paid off as she won the girls A Division with a three set match over Missy Frey (6-2, 4-6, 6-2).

Karen Del;Ninno won the consolation round with a convincing win over Susan Killilea. Karen nearly beat Maureen in the first round, but lost in a tiebreaker, hence ending up in the consolations.

Tina Favero and Laura Auer played well, but lost to the finalists in the semifinals. Many of the girls have played on the high school team and show a lot of promise.

In the B Division ,Karen Cutone is trying to follow in her cousin's footsteps by winning the final match over Amanda Holmes.

Winning the consolation round was Lee Iannachino and playing well in the tournament were the youngsrters Liane McAuliffe and Lauri Hird.

The club has several winter socials planned, and its' annual banquet and meeting are scheduled within the next few weeks. Interested club members or non-members should contact any of the officers below for information.

President Tom O'Malley, 658-4660; Vice President Patrick Hoffman, 658-7411; Treasurer Janet Cahill, 657-4206 or Secretary Irene Hoffman.

Some items to be discussed at the annual meeting will be extending club membership to non-residents and election of officers.

Horrors of Tewksbury asylum dimmed by modern medicines

By JIM ROUILLARD

"The essence of poverty is shame, shame to be overwhelmed by ugliness, shame to be a hole in the perfect pattern of the universe."

—Anne Sullivan Macy, reminiscing of her years spent at the almshouse at Tewksbury.

"Asylum" to contain the incurably insane, or last hope and refuge for the needy, the State Hospital in Tewksbury has seemed, to many, a dismal place where madness and terror once stalked, and where vestiges of mystery still cling.

Operated since 1959 by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health, the facility is now New England's largest hospital for the chronically ill. Yet its current inmates — 800-plus — number only a few more than the total of persons admitted within the first three weeks of its existence.

Founded in 1854 as a state almshouse for foreign-born paupers, and originally built to house 500 persons, it received 800 within 19 days of opening its doors.

Its original inmates were as varied as its ill-defined purpose was likely to include: infants, pregnant women, sufferers from infectious disease, the mentally ill.

Yet such a vagueness of purpose was by no means unique to the Tewksbury almshouse.

"Almshouses," according to historian Gerald N. Grob, "were intended to provide work for the able-bodied as well as shelter for the aged and helpless poor. . . And mental hospitals would serve both the community and the individual by providing care and treatment of mentally ill persons."

But from its founding, the history of the Almshouse at Tewksbury has been plagued by public fears and official tightfistedness.

Shortly after it opened, according to Grob, the Tewksbury almshouse established a separate department for incurably insane immigrant paupers:

"The inspectors of the almshouse approved of this development on the grounds that it benefited other public hospitals in the state and also offered inexpensive care for the alien insane. Conditions at the Tewksbury almshouse, however, deteriorated rapidly: its only redeeming feature was that its cost per patient per year by 1861 was $52, as compared with $130 at the three state hospitals.

"By 1866 separate accommodations for the insane had been constructed . . . (but) conditions there remained below minimum standards for at least a decade. Even after startling revelations about Tewksbury had been made public in the mid-1870s, the practice of separating the alien pauper incurably insane was not abandoned. The state simply renamed the institution as the Tewksbury Asylum for the Chronic Insane, although it still remained a part of the Tewksbury almshouse."

Today, the first thing you notice as you approach the hospital from the east, is the old administration building, a handsome structure of brick, arch and cupola, capped by dull-green copper, rising above gray stone walls and clean autumn fields where shimmering green plants of corn grow in summer.

You might be in colonial Williamsburg, or a sleepy 18th century English village.

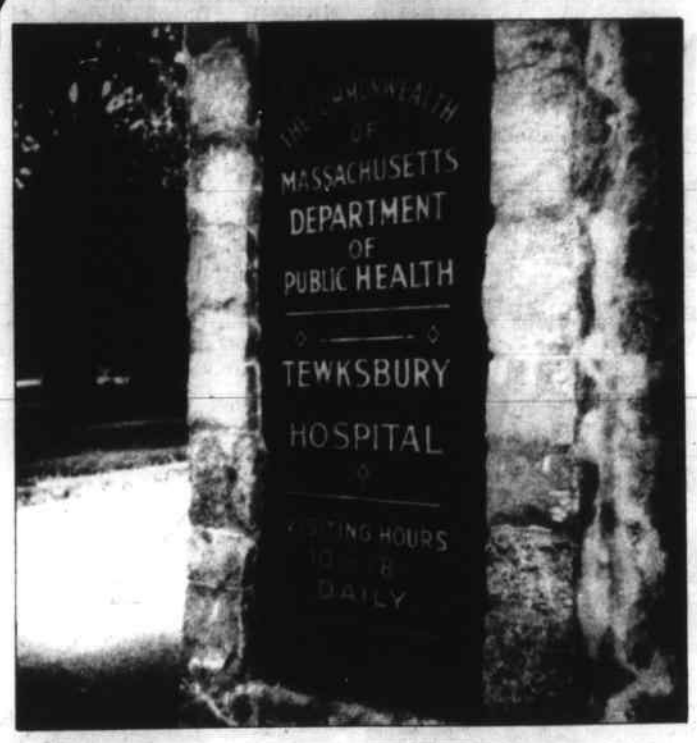

The stone-pillared entrance, on East Street, could be the gateway to a New England college campus, or the threshold to gothic romance.

But the Tewksbury State Hospital's past is not all romance.

The lingering tales of danger and madness can be dispelled by a visit and a glimpse of the modern buildings and activities, 20th-century therapeutic techniques, and the services which the 800-acre complex now provides to a range of clients — but it was during the time of "startling revelations" that the almshouse walls enclosed a very unhappy Anne Sullivan, the celebrated teacher who later unlocked the brilliant mind of deaf and blind author and lecturer Helen Keller.

Research into Sullivan's time there supplies a measure of just

Compugraphic sponsors 'Health Fair'

More than just band-aids

By DOUG BOYLE

WILMINGTON — With much of the news about the high tech industry being about layoffs, it's good to hear about a company doing something healthful for their employees.

At Compugraphic Corporation, the Massachusetts-based computer typesetting equipment manufacturer, many hours have gone into putting together a series of "Health Fair" so that employees may receive information and a diagnosis for many different aspects of their physical and mental health.

Charlotte Best, health services supervisor, described the program as not just a Compugraphic affair.

According to Best, "one of the important aspects of the program, is the reaching-out to work with many different community groups such as police and local and state governments."

Best called the program, which will be open to all of Compugraphic's 5,000 state employees, "a new concept for the company."

She explains that it shows the medical department to be more than "the old concept of just a 'band-aid' dispenser."

Best said that the fair "is just the first attempt at bringing out the talents in her department for health maintenance."

The members of her department that have worked heavily on the program are Anne Davis, the company's registered nurse at the Ballardvale facility, Charlene McGinnis, a registered nurse at 80 Industrial Way, in Wilmington and the department's secretary Lorraine Becotte.

One of the many ways in which the program is reaching into the community for support is through the use of students from the Shawsheen Valley Vocational School, in Billerica.

According to Best, 36 of the students with three of their teachers are slated to come in at different times during the four days of the program and assist the various health professionals participating in the fair in the disemination of information.

The students are all members of the school's medical training department, and are studying to be medical and laboratory technicians.

The Health Fair will run from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Wednesday for the next four weeks, with the first one scheduled for today at the cafeteria of the 80 Industrial Way building.

On succeeding Wednesdays, the program will be taken to Building 35, on Concord Street in North Reading, the Ballardvale headquarters of the company and to the Ward Hill, Haverhill facility.

Best explained that "because of the scope of the program, the company is allowing their employees time away from the job to attend the fair and participate in the diagnostic screenings.

Twenty-three different medical, safety and information organizations are scheduled to take part in the fair, and will pass out information on safety and good health techniques, as well as diagnosing for certain health problems.

Among those providing diagnostic booths are: the Damon Clinical Laboratory, who will provide blood tests for cholesterol and triglyceride levels and other functions, and the American Red Cross, who will be doing blood pressure levels as well as giving out

Becoming an old lady?

A married male friend of ours dropped in the other afternoon to tell us about his latest battle between the sexes:

My wife and I had a corker of an argument last night, and if I don't tell somebody about it I'm going to burst open. Having a few words is nothing new - married folks disagree all the time, but this one really got to me.

It all started when I didn't feel like going out to some disco called The Palace. I have enough trouble walking up the church aisle on Sundays to receive communion, never mind coordinating my feet and body on a dance floor in front of dozens of people so I don't resemble a monkey climbing all over a football. The kicker here is this: she never feels like going to discos herself anymore, but on this night she just had to go out to one. Maybe if she'd given me some sort of notice ahead of time, I might have psyched myself up for it. But to get it sprung on me at the last moment like that, well, it's out of the question. Besides I was tired as heck from a busy week of work.

So she comes out with, "All men start out as little boys and then quickly become little old ladies." Out of the blue! No in-between stages. "You start out as little boys in search of a mother image to love you, take care of you and forever give you

Compugraphic Health Fair

information on CPR and first aid.

Lowell General Hospital, St. Joseph's Hospital and a number of clinics including the Wilmington Regional Health Center along with several area dentists, optometrists and podiatrists will be on hand for informational purposes and to give advice on preventitive techniques.

An interesting aspect of the fair will be the participation of the Metro Police along with the Registry of Motor Vehicles, and local police departments.

The Metro Police will be providing programs on chemical substance and alcohol abuse, they will be joined in this by some of the local departments who will also provide information on child safety.

The Registry will be providing "the Convincer," a machine that simulates the effects of an auto accident at 5 miles per hour.

Another diagnostic function that will be provided is the "Biodot," a machine administered by the Associates in Psychological Services, that measures stress levels.

According to Best, one of the goals of the program is to "show that health and wellness go hand-in-hand."

According to Best, the industrial setting is where "one spends eight or more hours of the day on the job."

"It is also the place," she added, "where one spends too many sedentary hours at desks or in front of machines, and where he or she eats too much junk food and drinks too much coffee, smokes too much, is under a great deal of stress from demanding supervisors, and sadly lacks exercise."

According to a study that Best has done, the majority of the workers view health as the absence of illness.

Because of statistics culled by Best she feels that companies that provide programs such as the Health Fair will actually save quite a bit of money in the long run from benefits that do not have to be paid out and from the savings in training costs incurred when employees have to be replaced due to accidents and ill health.

Best reported that Compugraphic has made great strides in the programs that they provide for their employees with such ongoing programs as mini clinics and annual flu shots.

Tewksbury asylum

how far the hospital has come since its early years.

Sullivan was born in 1866 in a village outside of Springfield. The destitution of her family is described by biographer Joseph P. Lash as "starker and more desolate than even that of their compatriots . . .

"Half-blind, hot-tempered like her father, Annie responded to the miseries within and about her by lashing out . . ."

And misery followed misery. Mrs. Sullivan died. Annie's father, habitually drunk, "a brawler, and shiftless," would not keep her and her siblings, and so, on February 22, 1876, she and her brother Jimmie, on a crutch because of his diseased hip, were delivered in a Black Maria to the state poorhouse in Tewksbury.

THE TEWKSBURY ALMSHOUSE was a wretched home during the 1870s for indigent Annie Sullivan — the famous teacher who later unlocked the mind of blind and deaf author Helen Keller. Today, a modern daycare center on the grounds of the hospital provides tribute to the former resident.

Lash: "It was an isolated, forbidding huddle of grimy structures . . . (Yet) somehow it all seemed 'very homelike' to Annie. The children's cots were next to each other. They had the 'dead house' where corpses were prepared for burial to play in . . . and she was no stranger to filth and disease."

In the years that Anne Sullivan was at Tewksbury the poorhouse cared for an average of 940 men, women and children. The mortality rate was very high, particularly among the children, according to Lash, who adds:

"The superintendent repeatedly begged the state for a separate building in which to house the dangerous inmates, especially those with delirium tremens and offensive diseases . . . Every day at the blast of a whistle the women rushed to the narrow windows crying, 'The Horibles! The Horribles!' to watch the procession of men to the dining hall. Deformed, legless, some with faces distorted by cancer or goiters, they pushed like animals to get to their food."

Anne Sullivan's history at Tewksbury was characteristic, according to Lash — with the important difference that she escaped.

Her brother was not so lucky: Annie "awoke suddenly in the middle of the night and, sensing the empty space next to her, knew immediately what had happened . . . She begged to be allowed to follow the coffin to the burial ground . . . 'When I got back,' " she later wrote, " 'I sat down between my bed and his empty bed, and I hoped desperately to die.' "

But her chance to escape came when she heard that an investigation commission had arrived to inspect the institution. Gruesome stories about Tewksbury were rife in the state, even rumors of skins being used from dead bodies to make shoes. Anne "followed the group from ward to ward," Lash wrote," . . . (and) as the men stood at the gate, she acted. Without knowing which figure was the exalted Mr. Sanborn (chairman of the State Board of Charities), she flung herself into the group, crying, 'Mr. Sanborn, Mr. Sanborn, I want to go to school!' 'What is the matter with you?' a voice asked. 'I can't see very well.' 'How long have you been here?' She was unable to tell him. The men left, but soon afterwards a woman came and told her she was to leave Tewksbury and go to school."

Annie left to the cries of her fellow inmates who called to her: "Keep your head up, you're as good as any of them," but her experiences had left their mark: "I often wonder," she wrote in one note for her biographer, "how I escaped contamination in that slum — that 'rookery.' "

But the sometimes ugly past of Tewksbury Hospital is precisely that, the past. Today, the hospital and its staff provide services which have earned the praise of patients, their families, community groups and the state Commissioner of Public Health, Bailus Walker, Jr.

"Your medical and support staff," wrote the family member of one patient, "faced long hours, low pay and limited resources . . .

"Although often understaffed by virtue of budget constraints, the personnel stretched to provide the needed care. There was never a slackening in the quality of the care given to the patients . . ."

And another: "It is beyond the use of words for me to express my appreciation for the professional but still loving care shown my wife."

The Hospital administration building houses the headquarters for the Northeast Regional Health Office, which provides a variety of clinics for area residents.

Last May a Driving Under the Influence residence program began at Tewksbury Hospital, which Assistant Superintendent Aldo Caira described as a court-mandated option, to provide education and treatment to drivers twice convicted of drunken driving. The Tewksbury Hospital also serves as temporary residence for homeless post-alcoholic men, Caira said, and for an annual winter influx of homeless men from Boston's Combat Zone and the Boston Common, providing them a place to stay and three meals a day.

The bulk of the patients at Tewksbury Hospital, whose ages range from 20 to 90-plus, are the chronic and terminally ill. The average hospital stay is about three and a half years.

Activities for patients include: concerts by the Wakefield Retired Men's Club Band, softball games between the Tewksbury and Wilmington Police and Fire Departments, carnivals, cookouts, and even summer olympics.

In the clutch of woods east of the cornfields is the almost-forgotten burial ground for many who died while inmates at the almshouse. It's easy to feel the past there, as the chill autumn wind slices through the creaking pines, and the observer is left with a desolate feeling among the few graves which still bear small numbered crosses encircled in rusted iron wreaths.

But reflecting on the dismal lives and deaths of the early inmates at Tewksbury brings no warmth among the anonymous paupers' graves. The warmth must come from the living — and the knowledge that the present inmates receive "professional but still loving care," at the modern Tewksbury State Hospital complex of new brick and weathered stone.

Roving

approval," she adds. I mean, from not feeling like Fred Astaire to this, all in one fell swope. Can you believe it?

Then she tells me, "Once you find that mother image, it's hey! I've got a good thing here, I want to get married and hold on to it."

I'll admit I might have found a good thing when I met my wife, but if I recall correctly, it was she who pushed for the stroll down the aisle. "But something happens to those little boys after they get married," she goes on. "They quickly transform into little old ladies who just want to sit around the living room, criticizing the government and watching tv. At least the little boy had some adventure in him. He'd go out and do a little foot shuffle once in awhile, even if he did look like a fool. But after he gets that mother image he's seeking, forget it, it's a whole new creature that emerges from the shell of that little boy."

Have you ever heard such baloney? Well, at least that's what I told her. I told her I look at things differently. I think women go from little innocent girls in search of a man to love them, protect them and provide them with a sense of security to little old ladies who just want to spend their time gossiping and shopping for new toilet seat covers. Yessiree, that's what I told her.

The way things were going for women in the sixties and seventies, I thought there'd be a whole new breed of women out there by now. But no, they're no different now than they were in the forties and fifties. Regardless of what those women's organizations want everybody to believe, there are a lot of women out there who are forgetting all about the progress made during those turbulent sixties and seventies. They are returning to the ideals of the forties and fifties, when women really got into being, well, women. The way they dressed, the way they acted.

That's O.K., though, because I like women to look and act like women, not corn farmers and truck drivers. My wife has a lot of nerve getting upset because I didn't feel like going disco dancing. As far as she's concerned, the return to the old-fashioned woman means it's all right for her to become laid back when she wants to be laid back, but the same doesn't aply to the man in the house.

I can remember when my wife and I met. She was a knockout (and frankly still is) who loved to get decked out and go out on the town for a fancy dinner and some dancing. Then we got married, and all that seemed to come to a screeching halt. Then it was buy a house. Have kids. Take care of the house, Raise the kids. The spark was definitely dwindling.

Now all of a sudden she reappears at our bedroom door on a Saturday night, while I'm trying desperately to shake off the tremors from an arduous week of wheeling and dealing, wearing a wild-looking red mini-dress, high heels, mesh stockings and a crazy-looking hairdo. She tells me, "I want to hit the Palace for the night, baby!"

I told her we don't live in a kingdom, that our form of government is a democracy and that I vote to stay at home and take a nap.

I should have known better. The first inkling of World War III had erupted. That's when she told me I had become an old lady. I still can't believe it. I tried to explain to her that I can't be thinking about going to a ball at a palace when I've got an eleven hundred dollar a month mortgage payment. Besides our palace needs new storm windows, I told her. And if I'm such an old lady, how come I can still mow the grass, prune the trees, wash the car, clean the cellar, seal the driveway and even scrub the tub once in a blue moon. Most of which, I reminded her, I'd just finished doing one hour earlier.

I've come to the conclusion that men haven't really changed all that much. Women, on the other hand, go through these radical changes every few years or so. One minute they want men to behave such-and-such way, then the next minute they want them to act in another way. Men appear to become like old ladies after they're married because they have to learn to tolerate all those radical changes women go through.

The bottom line is this: I ended up going along with my wife's latest "phase." I got out of bed grumbling, sure, but I got out, and I got dressed up and we went to this place called The Palace (I found out The Palace was a disco complex off of Rte. 1 in Saugus!). I pushed myself to shuffle my feet around a bit for her, so she could show off that new red dress of hers. I went through all of that, and would you believe she still thinks I'm acting like an old lady.

Why? Because now she wants me to join some club, something called Club Med. Sounds liks a group of old fogeys who get discounts on high blood pressure pills at CVS.

Now that I've got all this off my chest, I think I'll trot over to Suffolk Downs for the rest of the afternoon to try to remind myself what it was like before I became such an old woman.

Baskin & Batteau at the Collins Center

Buskin & Batteau, the popular and versatile songwriters-preformers and the multi-talented story-telling mimes Stromberg & Cooper bring their unique stage shows to Andover's J. Everett Collins Center for the Performing Arts on Saturday, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. Both teams enthralled Collins Center audiences last year with their spicy entertainment and return this season with more pun-laden lyrics, rich melodies, mime and very dry humor!

Music industry veterans, Buskin & Batteau have been repeatedly cited for their ingenious performances which carefully combine wry humor and talented song-writing with instrumental and vocal virtuosity. This refreshing combination caused one critic to say the B&B sophisticated act "breathes a new life into the unfashionable genre of the folk-pop singer-songwriter."

Prior to their initial collaboration 15 years ago, David Buskin & Robin Batteau each worked as solo recording artist. As songwriters their material has been recorded by such musical luminaries as Bette Midler, Peter, Paul & Mary, Anne Murray, Johnny Mathis and Shirley Bassey among many others.

Most recently, Buskin & Batteau have been working closely with Tom Rush, whose instinct for discovering great songwriters is legendary. Tom was the first to record the work of Joni Mitchell, Jackson Browne, and James Taylor, and his current repertoire includes several songs by David and Robin.

Joining Buskin & Batteau are Bob Stromberg and Michael Cooper who will bring to the Collins Center the very best of their story telling material and mummery antics.

Drawing upon monologues dialogues, and pantomine, Stromberg & Cooper tell stories through comedy, pathos, original music and audience particiation. They aim to teach listeners and watchers of all ages to laugh a little bit and experience the "joy of the senses" through the vehicle of lems" in their homework because the "AA" batteries in the calculator went dead. If there are any readers who think I'm kidding, "What is the square root of 69696?" I asked my next door neighbor Paul Rao, "What do you know about square root?" I don't know," he said, "unless you tell me the name of the TREE it's from."

Hey kids, it's easy to spell "banana" — you just have to know "when" to "stop." A frog took out an insurance policy with Jim Curley's insurance in case it "croaks." John Dennison of Barker Lumber is a distinguished looking gentleman. He has that "spruced" up appearance and is very popular because he is an "oak-A" kind of a guy. Bill McCall is the yard foreman. You can't "stump" Bill about wood. I asked him, "How can you tell a 'dogwood' tree?" Bill came right back with "By its 'bark,' you idiot." Just for that Bill, I'll bring the matter up at the next "Board Meeting," we'll hold a "panel discussion," then someone will walk the "plank!"

Folks, have you noticed that many women are joining the ranks of real estate brokers? I welcome them because they are more knowledgeable about kitchens, closet space, laundry areas and room design. The men, however, may know more about foundations, construction and roofs — so working together they sure make a wonderful team. My wife Kathy missed her daily afternoon nap yesterday — she slept right through it.

Firefighter Dan Hogan of the Woburn Fire Department is such a nice guy that I think of him as a "Ladder Day Saint." There isn't anything more important in the field of teaching, business, military or writing than good clear communication. You must be sure that what you mean is understood. A case in point: A blacksmith removed a red hot iron from the forge, placed it on the anvil and shouted to his helper, "Pick up that 165 pound sledge hammer and when I nod my head 'hit' it!" Father Burns told me, "I love Woodchips, it makes a nice MULCH."

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

My favorite columnist, Jeremiah Murphy, told me once, "Woodchipper, consider yourself lucky if you receive a compliment for any article you may write. But if you ever want to test if anyone is reading your copy, misspell or omit a person's name." Mr. Murphy, you are right. I received a broadside (no pun intended) from my Tewksbury friend Joe Foley. Joe said, "Joe Brodeur taught you everything he knew about shipbuilding and you were and still are stupid." (Joe Brodeur was my partner in the Boston Naval Shipyard.) "Furthermore," Joe Foley continued, "your parents must have been 'weight lifters' because they sure raised a 'dumbbell.' "These 'harpoons' were fired towards me because their names have indeed been omitted only because I want Woodchips to be a first class column. My Aunt Maria had to get into the act saying, "You see, people are getting wise to you, why don't you go to Hollywood, the walk would do you good." Folks, I guess the moon is in the proper phase because Frank Mazzoni of Wilmington hit me with "Woodchipper, just because your ears look like two potato chips that doesn't mean you're Wise! "

What a refreshing relief meeting a gentleman with a lot of "class." Mr. Bill Dwyer of Wakefield. Bill is a sales representative for all U. S. A. Airlines. I am quite sure that Bill doesn't know about Frank Perdue Airline. It is never detered by "fowl" weather, although I must admit, there is quite a bit of "squawking" among the crew members. Officers Paul Pierce and Bob Giguere were dispatched to the Stone Zoo area. They were to investigate and make out a report of a dead horse in the vicinity of Sigourney Road. Arriving on the scene Bob asked Paul "Can you spell Sigourney Road?" "Nope," answered Paul, "OK then, let's drag this horse over to the next street, I'm sure I can spell Derby Road for my report." Dick Powers said to me, "When you wife Kathy first met you it must have been "love at first fright! " Folks, has this ever happened to you? My friend Howie Murphy had to work late at the plant, so he tried to call Maureen his wife to inform her. After 40 minutes of busy signals, he asked the operator if she would please "cut" in so he could get an important message through. "Only in case of life or death am I allowed to do that sir." "Well," exclaimed Howie, "if that's my teenage daughter Claire tying up the phone, there's going to be a murder! " My wife Kathy is taking a course in interior decorating and is practicing it at home. I have the black and blue marks to prove it. She keeps moving the beds, bureaus, chairs and tables every other day. I get up at five in the morning to go to work and it's pitch dark at that hour — well yesterday, getting out of bed, I nearly fell out of my bedroom window, I had forgotten that she had moved the bed against a window wall! "Knock on wood," I'm glad I'm NOT superstitious — but did you know that most hotels don't have a 13th floor? And some super markets don't have a number 13 checkout lane? Things like that never bother me because I always carry a rabbit's foot in my right pocket!

I don't know if it will ever end — the match company employees say they are going to "strike;" the bakers want more "dough;" sausage makers are complaining that it's very difficult for them to "make both ends meet"; it "seams" the dressmakers' contract is coming apart; the "mattress" workers are accused of "featherbedding" and the farmers keep saying "This is the last straw." I think the local fence company is already OUT on strike — I saw "pickets" all around the place when I rode by this morning. Have no fear, I'll keep you "posted." I sure hope that after reading this some of my readers don't "ride me off on a rail! "

The class of 1925 of Wilmington High School held its 60th reunion. Five of the original 23 members were present. They were Helen Blake, Ruth Byam, Sybil Wiberg, Albert Simpson and Gertrude Condrey. I don't know any one of these wonderful people personally but I'm willing to wager that they can do a square root problem, add, subtract and divide a set of figures and come up with the correct answer. "Well," you may ask, "what's so great about that?" They can do it "without" the use of a calculator, "that's what's great about it! " Everything stopped at my house last night. Maureen, Mark and Johnny couldn't do their "math prob-

Luxury on Trial

Good taste for rent: Now you can try out various styles of furniture in our home by renting before you buy.

What is your design for living?

For many people, an attractive, completely decorated apartment or house is a fantasy for the future. You can dream about how you want your living space to look, but your present economics make decorating an unaffordable luxury. Further, if your job means frequent moves or if you're just not ready to put down roots, acquiring furniture and accessories is impractical.

A beautiful solution has been discovered by many transferred executives, athletes, diplomats and entertainers: renting home furnishings. Furniture rental makes it possible to enjoy a tastefully and comfortably furnished home without sacrificing style and without the expense of buying and maintaining furnishings. It can easily fit into a limited budget.

A boon for the budget-minded, home furnishings rental offers many economical advantages. Complete furnishings for a one-bedroom apartment often can be rented for as little as $60 per month. Personal requirements—desks, bookshelves and sleeper-sofas—can be a part of a monthly fee. Add $20 to $50 for pickup and delivery and the cost of living for a year in a fully furnished home, decorated to your taste, is $800.

Unlike buying furniture, renting carries no interest charges or maintenance expenses.

Whether a mere whim or a matter of necessity, furniture rental allows you to change a room setting instantly or to live with dozens of furniture styles before you decide which you like well enough to buy.

For a nationwide list of showrooms belonging to the Furniture Rental Association of America, call 1-800-FOR-RENT. From Ohio, Alaska and Hawaii, call 614-845-1273.
